

The real question is: Do companies really want to spend extra money to create backdoors and securing them just so the government can access their network? Who do you think loses in this deal? The cost is passed onto the consumers. We already have to foot the bill for the war. Didn't our forefathers die for FREEDOM in this country? So we are sacrificing privacy/freedom for the sake of "SECURITY"? We're moving backwards. Please don't do this.